CONCEPT NOTE

Indian ethics, undoubtedly, is one of the great moral philosophies of the world. The ethical thought of India is primarily framed upon the ideas found in the Manu Smriti, the Jaimini Sutras, and the Bhagavad Gita. The main theme of Indian ethics is to offer a proper lifestyle to people so that they may attain a state of mental peace. It advocates five main paths for leading a meaningful life. Ahimsa, Satya, Asteya, Brahmacharya, and Aparigraha are the five pillars of Indian ethics. These principles aim to establish mental peace at the individual level as well as world peace at the global level. Ahimsa is regarded as the highest moral principle and should be strictly followed by each and every individual. The other pillars are equally important, and all of them are interrelated. Therefore, it is essential to follow the path of Indian ethics for the greater interest of society.

This international seminar on “Indian Ethics and Their Implications” aims to examine rigorous critical exegesis and foster a multidisciplinary dialogue on the spiritual identity, historical continuities, contemporary relevance, and future trajectories of Oriental ethical values in higher education. The academic event seeks to create an environment for the exchange of ideas and critical documentation of India’s profound value-based educational tradition. The seminar also seeks to explore the implications of Indian ethics and their imperative frameworks for contemporary higher education. Therefore, we invite scholarly, original, and unpublished research papers that critically engage with the following sub-themes but are not limited to the theme.
